Barge Laden With Ice Arrives-Muddy Water Drives Fish Away-Marine Matters.

The dredging machine belonging to John Miller & Co. is hauled out on the marine railway at Bennett's boatyard to have her hull rebuilt and for other repair work. When the dredge is ready for service again it will be taken around to the Eastern up banks to form the walls of a pond on the flats, into which the hydraulic dredge Dewey will pump liquid mud, in order to raise it above the tide level. The dredge, it is expected, will be on the marine railway for two weeks, as much woodwork is to be renewed about her hull and house. Miller's dredge is the only machine of its kind now in service on the river available for the deepening of the docks along the
